Home Radio Pictures Within 18 Months And Motorcar 'Sleepers' Are Forecast

Reproduction of news dispatches and pictures by a radio attachment for home use, within 18 months, and the general use of motorcars with sleeping accommodations, are among developments forecast by Allan Brown, director of the Associated National Advertisers, in a talk at the Advertising Club luncheon in the Hotel Statler, Boston, March 26.

Mr. Brown had just returned from a trip across the country, on which he had visited many of the important research laboratories and had inspected their latest achievements. Among these were new radio facsimile apparatus and new streamline cars with space for undressing a bed.

He foresaw the day when the first of these inventions would compel present newspaper organizations to turn into news gathering services for radio transmission of bulletins and pictures. The new sleeping car automobiles, he predicted, too, would exert a considerable influence upon hotel and wayside cabin business.

All inventions such as these, he declared, while upsetting existing forms of business, introduced all sorts of new opportunities for men of vision and initiative. For men of this type, he insisted, there never had been a greater opportunity for success than at the present moment.

In traveling over the United States, he said, he had been impressed particularly with the fact that people everywhere were waiting to buy things that are better than they have been in the habit of obtaining. In the same way they cherish a universal desire to better themselves in order to appreciate life more completely.

"There is always a ready market for something that is better, something that does an old job in a new and better way," he reiterated.

Referring to advertising Mr. Brown set up one standard for the preparation of copy. "Put the arguments used in your advertisements in the mouth of an actual salesman, talking to a customer in a store," he said. "Would such a salesman say to a woman who wishes to buy soap: 'Madame, use this soap and you will be surrounded by admiring youths?'—No, he would not.

"What we need in advertising is straightforward statement of facts concerning the product, its price and its real uses."

Railroad Boosts Pay 5 P. C. for 39,500

BALTIMORE, Md., March 28 (AP)—The pay tickets of 39,500 employees of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad will be fattened at the rate of $280,000 monthly by a 5 per cent salary increase, going into effect Monday.

This raise will complete restoration of a 10 per cent reduction made Feb. 1, 1933. It will amount to $3,100,000 a year.

This salary restoration is general among railroads of the country entering into an agreement with labor representatives for the 1932 cut. The first restoration of 2½ per cent was made July 1, 1934, and a similar additional one last Jan. 1.

His Business

The park orator looked around him.

"You, my friend," he said, gazing intently at a member of his audience, "are you treading the straight and narrow path?"

The man nodded. "I am."

"And do you find it easy?

"When I started I didn't, but now it comes naturally to me. I don't know how I'd get on if I didn't stick rigidly to it and keep my mind on nothing else."

"And will you explain to these ladies and gentlemen why you feel you should continue on the straight and narrow path?"

"Certainly. If I didn't I should fall on. I'm a tight-rope walker."—Tit-Bits.

FACTS about the BIBLE

Prepared for The Christian Science Monitor by Thomas L. Leishman, M. A.

'Camel' and 'Needle's Eye.'

IN OUR Common Version of Matthew 19:24 we read that "it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God." Some have supposed this to be simply an example of peculiarly vivid hyperbole; while others contend that "the Needle's Eye" may have been the local name for a small door or gate in the wall of Jerusalem—a door which would not admit the entrance of a loaded camel.

There is, however, good reason to suppose that Jesus ordinarily spoke Aramaic and it seems that in that language, or in the closely related tongue called Syriac, the word "gamla" means either "camel" or "a large rope" (cf. Lamsa: "The Gospels According to the Eastern Version," p. xi).

Even in Greek there is a word "kamilion" ("rope") almost identical in form with "kamelon" ("camel"); so the reference may well have been to what one might call "a cable" instead of "a camel" (to suggest the assonance of the two words).

Planneleite Nightgowns

ONE Seattle woman, thrown suddenly upon her own resources, has found that plying her needle with intelligence is a means of achieving more than a mere living.

As a contrast to most of the modern offerings of the stores, she started to produce flannelette nightgowns. She found the revival of the gowns, the revival of cold weather readily acceptable. Many women were extremely glad to have this warm attire in preference to some of the flimsy articles featured in the stores.

She has now widened her clientele from the few she was able to call upon and who avidly ordered, to include the local stores, so that she has orders for all she can produce.

Thoughtful

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

A TEACHER was employed in a rural district situated in the foothills of the Pacific Coast mountains. It was a remote spot, way of traveling.

Arriving one Monday morning, on the local logging-train, after a week-end vacation, she discovered that the slow transportation had caused her to be thirty minutes late for school. She hurried toward the schoolhouse feeling that an explanation was due her pupils. However, none of them were in sight on the playground and not a sound could be heard in the vicinity.

She walked into the schoolroom and was pleasantly surprised to find each pupil diligently studying and the room in perfect order. When the clock had struck nine, the older children suggested the idea of carrying on the work until the teacher arrived and had helped the younger children with their lessons. They received well-deserved praise for their thoughtfulness.

Daily Anecdote

Outnumbered

Prepared for The Christian Science Monitor

THROUGHOUT the Civil War there was a steady stream of adviseers visiting President Lincoln, many of them people who knew nothing about conditions, a fact that did not prevent them from offering advice. On one occasion one of these callers asked: "How many men have the Confederates now in the field?"

"About one million, two hundred thousand," answered the President.

The visitor avowed his surprise. "Surely not so many as that, Mr. Lincoln?"

"No doubt of it. You see, all of our generals when they get whipped say the enemy outnumbers them from three to five to one, and I must believe them. We have four hundred thousand men in the field, and three times four makes twelve; don't you see it? It's as plain as the nose on your face."

Co-operative Despite Themselves

THE moderation of Europeans statesmen in the face of the present crisis is at least cooked the channels of conciliation that have been nothing to match the rash acts of pre-war diplomacy. So far there is still operative powerful motive for peace in the present political expectancy that when an all-out conflict is precipitated by the nations and has ceased to be merely a European war, but has grown into a world conflict, the United States will be found to be on the side of the victorious group of powers. Whether this be true or not, it is certain that the United States has become a factor in world politics which cannot be ignored. Whether it will be a factor for peace or for war depends largely upon the attitude of the people of this country toward the present situation.

Despite the international epoch of interference and the political and cultural expenditures, there are possibilities of economic progress in the industry and in the agriculture of the country. Despite the "spanks mate"? Here the pessimistic "spanks mate"? Here the code makers sibbed in leaving headstrings, but there is a certain hope in the situation. This is the fact that the United States has a vast territory and a population of 120,000,000 people. Despite the interference of outside politics, the country is still in a position to enjoy a large measure of prosperity. Despite the fact that the United States has been drawn into the vortex of international politics, it is still in a position to enjoy a large measure of prosperity. Despite the fact that the United States has been drawn into the vortex of international politics, it is still in a position to enjoy a large measure of prosperity.

Walking to Work

ECONOMISTS in search of fresh lines of investigation might well turn their attention to certain aspects of the unemployment problem. Is walking to work a depressing business? Is it a cheap form of exercise? Is it a profitable way of getting to work? Is it a pleasant way of getting to work? Is it a healthful way of getting to work? Is it a way of getting to work? Is it a way of getting to work? Is it a

Soviet Atheism Attacks Orthodox Greeks, Evangelicals and Jews With Weapons of Social Ostracism, Confiscation of Property and Antireligious Propaganda—Ministers and Families Barred From Jobs

Kelsingion Face Common Foe in Russia

Foxscript to Russia

Fact of Three Nations

By William Henry Chamberlin

Staff Correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Winter.

Whether the perspective of almost a year's absence from Soviet Russia gives the writer of this article a keener appreciation of the Union of Militant Atheists than he would have had if he had remained in Moscow, or whether the process of adaptation to the Soviet environment has been unusually rapid, he finds that "the Soviet Union is a far more interesting country than it was a year ago. Then it was still in the throes of the first Five-Year Plan, and the whole country was in a state of feverish excitement. Now the Five-Year Plan is over, and the Soviet Union is settling down to the task of digesting the gigantic industrial and agricultural changes that have been made in the last few years.

Russia is at present in the midst of a period of relative stability in foreign affairs and growing internal consolidation. The Soviet Government has succeeded in establishing its authority over the whole country, and it has also succeeded in creating a new privileged class, which has a definite stake in the present régime and which is ready to defend it against any attempt at counter-revolution.

The Soviet Government has also succeeded in establishing a network of elementary, secondary, technical and higher schools, which is beginning to turn out a steady stream of young men and women who have received their education entirely under the Soviet régime. Finally, the Soviet Government has succeeded in creating a powerful military machine, which is generally considered to be the strongest on the European continent, with the exception of France.

Russia's foreign relations are also relatively stable. Her relations with Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Latvia are on a normal basis. Her relations with Great Britain and France are somewhat strained, but not to the point of a rupture. Her relations with Japan are correct, and there is no reason why they should not remain so indefinitely. Russia's relations with the United States are probably the most satisfactory of all.

Russia is a land of many faces and many contrasts. Ultra-modern factories and collective farms are to be found in the same country with primitive peasant villages and nomadic tribes. Communist fanatics and militant atheists are to be found in the same country with Orthodox priests and Protestant pastors. Some regions, such as the Ukraine and the Volga valley, are relatively prosperous, while others, such as the Kuban and the Don, are suffering from the effects of the famine of 1931

with
The Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON, March 29 (AP)—Legislative pace was hot today, with a new NRA bill bursting into a surprised capital, the pink slip fading out the back door, and neutrality legislation becoming increasingly likely as an attempt to keep the United States out of overseas war.

While Congress labored, a benign spring sun poured down on the nation's capital, and a vast horde of cherry blossoms will be at their height this week-end. From the Monitor's offices, the burgeoning pink blooms and the NRA's imposing headquarters in the Commerce Building are in overlapping range, and it almost seems as if the cherry blossom were a wreath in honor of the bill to extend its existence.

This, however, is clearly not the view of the hundreds of thousands of motorists who shortly will be creeping more slowly around the tidal basin. Nor is Congress, also creeping along in its legislative way, likely to agree entirely.

Big Army: The preparedness juggernaut continued to roll today. The House gave final approval to the $491,998,170 War Department appropriation bill—the largest since the World War and its liquidation—after partisanship had abated.

The usual overwhelming majorities were swept the bill through, accompanied by the usual pin-pricks from antimilitarists. The Senate has already passed the bill, minor amendments must be adjusted, and then it goes to the President.

The bill includes $341,000,000 for military activities of the War Department and $80,000,000 for "non-military." It is $29,000,000 above budget estimates introduced in January and $78,000,000 above last year's expenditures. Among amendments was that increasing the regular army's enlisted personnel from 118,000 to 165,000. Additional bills are on their way through Congress increasing officer personnel and providing extensive funds for army building. Moreover, the army is angling for expenditures of $407,000,000 from the work relief funds, most of it for armament increases of the type of new aircraft, heavy artillery and munitions stores.

As the bill went through, one voice, that of Representative W. P. Lambeth (D) of Kansas, was raised in protest. He deplored "ingenious tendencies of this Administration, particularly this display of a rosecolored attitude toward the Japanese people, almost certain to influence whatever feeling against the United States they may have."

Social Security: Private insurance companies were successful in getting the House Ways and Means Committee to strike out of the social security bill the section providing for voluntary old-age annuities which they claim would interfere with the sale of their own annuities. Several days ago the committee by a close vote decided to retain the section but today reversed their decision.

Not a dissenting voice was raised against the unemployment insurance section of the bill, calling for a graduated pay roll tax, starting at 1 per cent next January and rising to 3 per cent three years later.

All other sections of the bill were approved except the retaliation tax, now being swept by the usual pin-pricks from antimilitarists. The Senate has already passed the bill, minor amendments must be adjusted, and then it goes to the President.

In an interview in Washington, the Central American visitor discussed methods of co-operation by and between the relations of his country and the United States could be improved.

Sitting in the front row, fingering his ivory-headed walking stick and stroking his spirituring moustache, was Stanislaw Patek, the Polish Ambassador. Also in the front row with a few vacant gilt chairs between them—was the stock figure of Ambassador Troyanovsky. They relieved with each other in the temporary stop-gap advocates. remarkable affair. Next by was Ickes, Secretary of the Interior. He, too, applauded, but in the handclasp there was no bearing on the current European situation.

Poland today is leaning toward Germany; Russia is appreciative. Hence it could not be totally without diplomatic significance that the Soviet Embassy so strikingly honors its neighbor to the west.

In diplomacy, as all the traditional courtiers have said, nothing is insignificant.

Munitions Board Studies Neutrality

eign policy is not yet made, despite President Roosevelt's open invitation—delivered privately to the committee last week—to go ahead on the subject of neutrality. Much depends on the form of the resolutions, and this is not yet determined.

While this decision was in the making, it became known that the Navy Department several months ago went on record strongly opposing a new neutrality policy which would yield in advance any American claims on "freedom of the seas." The Navy advice, furnished to the State Department when its study of neutrality was under way, was generally to the effect that the War Department shares these views, although it is primarily a naval matter.

Adjustment Needed

Whether President Roosevelt takes sharp issue with his own Navy Department—his favorite son of the service and Government—cannot be definitely said. Although the Chief Executive has urged various authorities after extensive canvassing of its war plans division and the war college. Relinquishment of neutral rights, it was felt, involves giving up or seriously jeopardizing one of the three bases of sea power, which are the navy itself, naval bases and merchant marine.

The basic precept of American naval purpose—after the protection of the United States itself—is the protection of American interests abroad, and that includes commercial and economic interests in the seven seas. Naval policymakers say, therefore, that to throw those interests upon their own risk at the outset of a conflict would be to weaken the merchant marine, and in turn to weaken the navy itself.

Will Report Monday

The Nye committee members were furnished with drafts of resolutions by Senator Nye, and over the week-end are studying them for report on Monday. The resolutions are intended to be simply a short-cut to new neutrality policy, and not full revision of statutes on the subject. Senator Nye, explaining their purpose, says:

"The problem has many ramifications requiring the closest study and deliberation. But we believe that something should be done at once to

Mandatory or Permissive

The average senatorial committee-mentator is of two minds on this important choice. On the one hand, the advantages of a mandatory policy in preventing American participation in war are obvious, and such a course would leave less discretion with the President, which is a growing demand of Congress. But on the other hand, the very rigidity of the mandatory policy—involving decisions—is attacked by many Senators, notably of the isolationist school. The choice is a difficult one for them to make.

Relinquishment of neutral rights, it was felt, involves giving up or seriously jeopardizing one of the three bases of sea power, which are the navy itself, naval bases and merchant marine.

Manchukuo Closed to U.S. Oil; Cotton Making Division Urged

Dr. Sprague for Cheaper Goods to Japan and Finer to U. S. and Britain

Division of cotton cloth production between the three great cotton countries of the world—Japan to produce the cheaper grades of cloth; Great Britain and the United States to produce the finer grades—was advocated today by Dr. O. M. W. Sprague, former adviser to the Bank of England and to the Roosevelt Administration. He declared the plan to be the only real solution to the cotton textile dilemma.

In his office at Harvard Business School Dr. Sprague compared the problem facing the textile manufacturers in this country, due to Japanese competition, with the cotton textile competition between New England and the South.

As New England Expense

"Just as the South, in a sense, has developed at the expense of New England," he asserted, "so the industry here as a whole may suffer from competition from Japan." Because Japan has the necessary machinery, the low labor costs and because of the depreciation of the yen, Dr. Sprague's solution would give the mproduction of the cheaper goods from our export trade.

Increases Cost

The processing tax unobjectionably increases the cost of production, he said, but it should only have been levyied for one or two years at the most as a temporary expediency. The result of the tax should have been to develop a demand for other products by reducing the amount of cotton on the market and thereby jumping up its price, he said. But because of the great industrial jumble, he pointed out that this has not occurred.

"That is why," he said, "I favor offsetting the processing tax today by an additional duty on cotton imported. Industry would then be in just the place it was before the tax was imposed and perhaps some international agreement could be worked out. He believed, he said, that the present price of cotton at 12 cents should be reduced to nine or 10 cents. "I am not suggesting that textiles can increase their demand by a reduction in prices for they would undoubtedly go into industry today if they did—but I do think it's time for action and not platitudes."

"It is the old simple story of letting the country best fitted to produce a commodity produce it," said Dr. Sprague. He believes the more technical economic philosophy a government follows the deeper into economic jumble it tumbles. "I'm not pessimistic," he said, "just a bit forelighted."

Judge Convicts Liquor Of Murder in South

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

RALEIGH, N. C.—Pronouncing sentence on a 19-year-old youth who had been adjudged guilty of going to the home of his sister and killing his brother-in-law, after a quarrel, Judge Clawson L. Williams, of the Superior Court Bench, said to the prisoner:

"Young man, you are a perfect example of what liquor will do for anybody who tools with it. Liquor has widowed your sister, orphaned her child and made a murderer of you. Yet, there are people in this State who want to make it more accessible and deluge the State with it."

Barrack Declares Public Is Eager To Rob War of Profit

Never Since World War, He Says, Have People Been So Keen to Futility

Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON, March 29—The Senate Munitions Investigating Committee was told by Bernard M. Baruch, former chairman of the War Industries Board, that its education-al work has paved the way for universal co-operation in the United States to remove war profits.

Mr. Baruch sensed "a totally different attitude" today than was apparent in the World War, giving credit to the Nye Committee. The changed viewpoint, he said, will make it easier to enforce the proposed "pay-as-you-go" plan for financing war out of taxes.

The financier became visibly animated as a youthful committee investigator, Alger Hiss, protégé of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, showered questions upon him designed to show the difficulties of enforcing Mr. Baruch's proposed "price ceiling."

Faith in Fellow Men

He reminded Mr. Hiss frequently that he was speaking from wartime experience. At one point, Mr. Baruch commented, "Well, I have a vote latin in my yellow man than some others have."

Turn of Labor to Communism Forecast for U. S. by Strachey

British Lecturer Tells Boston Interviewers That Injunction Will Handicap Workers—Denies Charges Faced in Deportation Proceedings

An American labor party with Socialist leanings and with a final elimination in Communism was predicted for the United States last night by John Strachey, much-publicized British "leftist lecturer" who came to Boston to make his final speech before sailing for England.

The tall good-natured Englishman—dressed in black hat, coat, tie, suit and shoes, as all convincing radicals are visualized by less liberal groups—explained his prediction of an American labor party with another prediction of "inflation as the immediate economic prospect for the United States."

"The working classes will suffer by such a move," Mr. Strachey asserted and "will band themselves together to really secure a democratic form of government." And Communism is the ultimate form of government, we all are coming to," he said. In that he included England as well as the other countries of Europe.

Activity in Colleges

The influence of the Communist Party in the United States has spread rapidly, he told reporters who crowded him at the station before his Ford Hall Forum address. He said, numerically, the Communist Party was about the same, but that through the distribution of literature and the increased activity in colleges and with Labor the Communist cause had advanced fast.

When cross-examined by one interviewer as to whether he was intending to join the Communist Party—or whether he ever would—Mr. Strachey declined to answer. He said, "I reserve the right to join any party I wish and I cannot say today what I might do next month or next year. I'm not a member of the Communist Party now. That is enough for the present."

Delayed by Hearing

Appearing as a very mild mannered man, Mr. Strachey, walking through the station, chuckled over the paradoxical situation that has arisen over the deportation charges held against him. He had planned to leave for England on the Berengaria today, but because of the deportation charges being held against him must remain over to face them. "I could leave now without facing the charges," he said, "but as I never advocated the overthrow of the United States Government I want to stay and clear myself."

He then blamed capitalism for causing the violent upheavals that would in time lead to any forceful overthrow of government. "Naturally Communists prefer not to use violent means of overthrow," he stated, "but that depends entirely upon capital's attitude and action.

With a "Cheer-o" and "I'll see you in 1937," he turned and strode off to Ford Hall Forum.

Colt's Gives Back NRA Blue Eagles; Strike Aid Goes On

HARTFORD, Conn., March 29 (AP)—A bundle to Blue-eagle placards representing all the Recovery Act insignias given Colt's Patent Fireams Mfg. Company for its several production lines earlier in the NRA, have been returned to the Government as directed by the NRA compliance division, it was disclosed today.

The action by the compliance division, taken on the basis of the National Labor Relations Board's finding that the company was violating section 7A of the Recovery Act, is the largest single instance of such action in Connecticut.

The order for removal of the Blue Eagle came exactly two weeks after more than 1000 employees of Colt's walked out for enforcement of the high NRA arbitration board's decision.

A plan to raise funds for the Colt's strikers through the issuance of "strike insurance bonds" was being discussed at a long conference of strike leaders here today.

From the information available, strike leaders propose to sell the bonds at $1 each to labor union members in Hartford factories. The income would be applied to a strike fund for the Colt's employees, who would, in turn, be obligated for repurchasing the bonds from the holders in the event that they went out on strike.

Colt Loses Blue Eagle

WASHINGTON, March 29 (AP)—NRA announced March 27 the right to use the Blue Eagle had been removed from the Colt Patent Fire-arms Manufacturing Company, of Hartford, Conn. The company was accused of having refused to bargain collectively with employees.

Oath of Allegiance Bill Is Signed in Vermont

MONTPELIER, Vt., March 29 (AP)—A law requiring public school teachers to take an oath of allegiance to both the Constitution of the United States and that of the State of Vermont became effective last night with the signature of Gov. Charles M. Smith.

A special commission appointed to determine whether the State should purchase the Barre-Montpelier airport reported there was no advantage to the State in the proposal.

Other important legislative business of the day included the defeat, 107 to 102 in the House of a bill to amend the absent voters' law to correct certain abuses. A bill to repeal the law has passed the Senate and is pending in the House.

Woodcarving of Vine and Grapes Is Surrounded by a Beautiful Dove With an Olive Branch in Its Beak.

Maine Man's Ability in Wood Carving Finds Expression at His Own Doorway

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

NEWCASTLE, Maine — Woodcarving has been both a vocation and an avocation with Edbury W. Hatch of this town. He learned the trade from William Southworth, an old-time wood carver of this town and later of Bath. Mr. Southworth specializes in figureheads.

In the old days every vessel that put to sea carried under her bowsprit a wooden statue, sometimes a Neptune or a Nereus, but more often a well-shaped sea nymph. Later the figurehead degenerated into a mere ingless molding.

Mr. Hatch, in gratitude for the heroic work of the local fire company, carved a wonderful sign which decorates Tamiscot Engine Hall. The front of his home is a curiosity. Every available bit of wood has been carved into something really artistic and beautiful.

The entrance to the front door is decorated largely with more or less conventional grape vines and leaves, but the character of the carving is not conventional. No living vine or fruit ever stood out more accurately. Every grape, every midrib on every leaf is true to nature. A lifelike head surmounts the vines and on top of the whole is a beautiful dove with an olive branch in its beak.

The porch door is richly carved with drapery and fruit and above is the coat of arms of the State of Maine. The details are hard-cut and fluted. Not a link of the chain on the anchor, not a single head of corn in the farmer's hand but is absolutely true to life. The apples on the pine tree and the deer at the foot of the tree are all drawn with the same fidelity.

Above this the gutter on eaves ends in a gargoyle equal to any on the medieval buildings of Europe. Over the stable door on a projecting beam, stands a proudly prancing while horse of almost life size.

Professor Thomson Honored by Medal Of German Society

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., March 29—On the occasion of his eighty-second birthday today, Prof. Elihu Thomson of this town, only surviving leader among the great inventors of the last century, was recipient of the medal of honor of the Verein Deutscher Ingenieure, the oldest and largest engineering society in the world.

The outstanding tribute of the German engineering profession to an American who holds 700 patents to his credit, was made at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Boston today at noon at a luncheon of the board of directors of the General Electric Company. In the absence of Professor Thomson, who was unable to be present, the medal, presented by Baron Kurt von Tippelskirch, German consul general in Boston, was received by Edwin W. Rice Jr., honorary chairman of the meeting and former president of the General Electric.

Professor Thomson is the first American to be awarded any German honorary medal or degree since the formation of the new government, and incidentally the second American ever to receive such honors, the previous award going to Dr. Calvin W. Rice.

The citation accompanying the medal read: "On Elihu Thomson, the great pioneer in the realm of engineering, the inventor and research scientist; the promotor of cooperation among engineers, there is offered on the anniversary of his 82d birthday, the VDI Medal of Honor."

Professor Thomson was one of the founders of the General Electric Company and his name and achievements in the field of research and invention is known throughout the world. He was a pioneer in arc lighting and wireless telegraphy development and is the father of alternating current distribution.

He is the only scientist in the world possessing the following three outstanding awards of the English scientific and engineering institutions: the Faraday Medal; the Kelvin Medal and the Hughes Medal of the Royal Society.

Other honors that have been conferred upon him include the Franklin Medal, the John Scott Medal, the John Price Medal, the Paris Exposition Grand Prize, the Rumford Medal, the Elliott Cresson Medal and the First Edison Medal of the A. I. E. E. He is a Chevalier and officer of the French Legion of Honor, and an honorary member of the Royal Institution of Great Britain.

Born in Manchester, Eng., Professor Thomson came to America at the age of 5 years.

Color of Bird's Wing Caught in Modern Dye

Special from Monitor Bureau

NEW YORK, March 29—Chemists will soon duplicate in textiles the colors of birds and butterflies, according to Dr. R. E. Rose, of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., in a report on the development of dyeing processes, issued by the Textile Institute.

Dr. Rose voiced gratification over this development even though it would render some dyestuffs obsolete, "because," he said, "the purity of these colors is so exquisite that we would be able to enter a new era in the use of color." He envisaged carrying this new color scheme even beyond textiles, into the arts of printing and interior decorating.

"The future holds one sure fact," he added. "There are no limits to the horizon. We seem to have climbed a mountain as the dyestuff industry has advanced, and our view has become wider and wider."

Students in Radio To Use Microphone

A radio lecture course which will give each of its members five minutes at the microphone will be inaugurated by active members of the radiocasting profession in Boston on Monday, April 1, at 7:30 p. m. It is one of two series of lectures being given by the Massachusetts University Extension Service under its Adult Life Enrichment projects.

The lecturers, drawn from the commercial, engineering and operating phases of the radiocasting industry, will each contribute a "slice" of their experience to the series of eight lectures which is named "Radio Microphone and Program Techniques." Director of the course is William N. Barber, educational director of Station WIXAL, the World Wide Broadcasting System, at whose offices on 70 Brookline Avenue the course will be held. Among lecturers in the course are Glenn H. Browning, radio engineer and designer; Samuel Curtis, Boston service manager of Station WBZ, and Linus Travers, program director of the Yankee Network.

The second series on "Radio Transmission and Engineering" is designed for those with knowledge already of some of the principles of radio transmission and will be conducted by C. Davis Belcher, formerly radio inspector with the radio division of the Department of Commerce, the Federal Radio Commission and the Coast and Geodetic Survey. The opening class meets Wednesday, April 3, at 7:30 p. m. at the offices of World Wide Broadcasting Corporation, 70 Brookline Avenue, Boston, whose facilities will be used to illustrate points in the technical course. Charge for this latter course is $10.

HOLC in New England In First Foreclosure

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., March 29 (AP)—The first foreclosure in New England by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation resulted today in the advertising of a stately New Bedford property.

The house and land will be sold by auction April 17. Mortgaged for $5200 by the late Oliver A. Brunelle, the house for many years was a Mt. Pleasant Street showplace.

The foreclosure was announced by Charles P. Cotter of Boston, regional HOLC manager.

Woonsocket C. of C. Asks Political Truce

WOONSOCKET, R. I., March 29 (AP)—The Woonsocket Chamber of Commerce today led a citizens' movement to bring about immediate abatement of a week-old political feud within the Woonsocket City Hall.

The Chamber of Commerce, in a paid advertisement, "viewed with alarm the situation which makes this community the laughing stock of other communities." The Chamber urged that the politicians responsible "forget politics and get down to business."

He said, "I reserve the right to join any party I wish and I cannot say today what I might do next month or next year. I'm not a member of the Communist Party now. That is enough for the present."

Delayed by Hearing

Appearing as a very mild mannered man, Mr. Strachey, walking through the station, chuckled over the paradoxical situation that has arisen over the deportation charges held against him. He had planned to leave for England on the Berengaria today, but because of the deportation charges being held against him must remain over to face them. "I could leave now without facing the charges," he said, "but as I never advocated the overthrow of the United States Government I want to stay and clear myself."

He then blamed capitalism for causing the violent upheavals that would in time lead to any forceful overthrow of government. "Naturally Communists prefer not to use violent means of overthrow," he stated, "but that depends entirely upon capital's attitude and action.

With a "Cheer-o" and "I'll see you in 1937," he turned and strode off to Ford Hall Forum.

Colt's Gives Back NRA Blue Eagles; Strike Aid Goes On

HARTFORD, Conn., March 29 (AP)—A bundle to Blue-eagle placards representing all the Recovery Act insignias given Colt's Patent Fireams Mfg. Company for its several production lines earlier in the NRA, have been returned to the Government as directed by the NRA compliance division, it was disclosed today.

The action by the compliance division, taken on the basis of the National Labor Relations Board's finding that the company was violating section 7A of the Recovery Act, is the largest single instance of such action in Connecticut.

The order for removal of the Blue Eagle came exactly two weeks after more than 1000 employees of Colt's walked out for enforcement of the high NRA arbitration board's decision.

A plan to raise funds for the Colt's strikers through the issuance of "strike insurance bonds" was being discussed at a long conference of strike leaders here today.

From the information available, strike leaders propose to sell the bonds at $1 each to labor union members in Hartford factories. The income would be applied to a strike fund for the Colt's employees, who would, in turn, be obligated for repurchasing the bonds from the holders in the event that they went out on strike.

Colt Loses Blue Eagle

WASHINGTON, March 29 (AP)—NRA announced March 27 the right to use the Blue Eagle had been removed from the Colt Patent Fire-arms Manufacturing Company, of Hartford, Conn. The company was accused of having refused to bargain collectively with employees.

Oath of Allegiance Bill Is Signed in Vermont

MONTPELIER, Vt., March 29 (AP)—A law requiring public school teachers to take an oath of allegiance to both the Constitution of the United States and that of the State of Vermont became effective last night with the signature of Gov. Charles M. Smith.

A special commission appointed to determine whether the State should purchase the Barre-Montpelier airport reported there was no advantage to the State in the proposal.

Other important legislative business of the day included the defeat, 107 to 102 in the House of a bill to amend the absent voters' law to correct certain abuses. A bill to repeal the law has passed the Senate and is pending in the House.

Woodcarving of Vine and Grapes Is Surrounded by a Beautiful Dove With an Olive Branch in Its Beak.

Maine Man's Ability in Wood Carving Finds Expression at His Own Doorway

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

NEWCASTLE, Maine — Woodcarving has been both a vocation and an avocation with Edbury W. Hatch of this town. He learned the trade from William Southworth, an old-time wood carver of this town and later of Bath. Mr. Southworth specializes in figureheads.

In the old days every vessel that put to sea carried under her bowsprit a wooden statue, sometimes a Neptune or a Nereus, but more often a well-shaped sea nymph. Later the figurehead degenerated into a mere ingless molding.

Mr. Hatch, in gratitude for the heroic work of the local fire company, carved a wonderful sign which decorates Tamiscot Engine Hall. The front of his home is a curiosity. Every available bit of wood has been carved into something really artistic and beautiful.

The entrance to the front door is decorated largely with more or less conventional grape vines and leaves, but the character of the carving is not conventional. No living vine or fruit ever stood out more accurately. Every grape, every midrib on every leaf is true to nature. A lifelike head surmounts the vines and on top of the whole is a beautiful dove with an olive branch in its beak.

The porch door is richly carved with drapery and fruit and above is the coat of arms of the State of Maine. The details are hard-cut and fluted. Not a link of the chain on the anchor, not a single head of corn in the farmer's hand but is absolutely true to life. The apples on the pine tree and the deer at the foot of the tree are all drawn with the same fidelity.

Above this the gutter on eaves ends in a gargoyle equal to any on the medieval buildings of Europe. Over the stable door on a projecting beam, stands a proudly prancing while horse of almost life size.

Professor Thomson Honored by Medal Of German Society

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., March 29—On the occasion of his eighty-second birthday today, Prof. Elihu Thomson of this town, only surviving leader among the great inventors of the last century, was recipient of the medal of honor of the Verein Deutscher Ingenieure, the oldest and largest engineering society in the world.

The outstanding tribute of the German engineering profession to an American who holds 700 patents to his credit, was made at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Boston today at noon at a luncheon of the board of directors of the General Electric Company. In the absence of Professor Thomson, who was unable to be present, the medal, presented by Baron Kurt von Tippelskirch, German consul general in Boston, was received by Edwin W. Rice Jr., honorary chairman of the meeting and former president of the General Electric.

Professor Thomson is the first American to be awarded any German honorary medal or degree since the formation of the new government, and incidentally the second American ever to receive such honors, the previous award going to Dr. Calvin W. Rice.

The citation accompanying the medal read: "On Elihu Thomson, the great pioneer in the realm of engineering, the inventor and research scientist; the promotor of cooperation among engineers, there is offered on the anniversary of his 82d birthday, the VDI Medal of Honor."

Professor Thomson was one of the founders of the General Electric Company and his name and achievements in the field of research and invention is known throughout the world. He was a pioneer in arc lighting and wireless telegraphy development and is the father of alternating current distribution.

He is the only scientist in the world possessing the following three outstanding awards of the English scientific and engineering institutions: the Faraday Medal; the Kelvin Medal and the Hughes Medal of the Royal Society.

Other honors that have been conferred upon him include the Franklin Medal, the John Scott Medal, the Paris Exposition Grand Prize, the Rumford Medal, the Elliott Cresson Medal and the First Edison Medal of the A. I. E. E. He is a Chevalier and officer of the French Legion of Honor, and an honorary member of the Royal Institution of Great Britain.

Born in Manchester, Eng., Professor Thomson came to America at the age of 5 years.

Color of Bird's Wing Caught in Modern Dye

Special from Monitor Bureau

NEW YORK, March 29—Chemists will soon duplicate in textiles the colors of birds and butterflies, according to Dr. R. E. Rose, of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., in a report on the development of dyeing processes, issued by the Textile Institute.

Dr. Rose voiced gratification over this development even though it would render some dyestuffs obsolete, "because," he said, "the purity of these colors is so exquisite that we would be able to enter a new era in the use of color." He envisaged carrying this new color scheme even beyond textiles, into the arts of printing and interior decorating.

"The future holds one sure fact," he added. "There are no limits to the horizon. We seem to have climbed a mountain as the dyestuff industry has advanced, and our view has become wider and wider."

Students in Radio To Use Microphone

A radio lecture course which will give each of its members five minutes at the microphone will be inaugurated by active members of the radiocasting profession in Boston on Monday, April 1, at 7:30 p. m. It is one of two series of lectures being given by the Massachusetts University Extension Service under its Adult Life Enrichment projects.

The lecturers, drawn from the commercial, engineering and operating phases of the radiocasting industry, will each contribute a "slice" of their experience to the series of eight lectures which is named "Radio Microphone and Program Techniques." Director of the course is William N. Barber, educational director of Station WIXAL, the World Wide Broadcasting System, at whose offices on 70 Brookline Avenue the course will be held. Among lecturers in the course are Glenn H. Browning, radio engineer and designer; Samuel Curtis, Boston service manager of Station WBZ, and Linus Travers, program director of the Yankee Network.

The second series on "Radio Transmission and Engineering" is designed for those with knowledge already of some of the principles of radio transmission and will be conducted by C. Davis Belcher, formerly radio inspector with the radio division of the Department of Commerce, the Federal Radio Commission and the Coast and Geodetic Survey. The opening class meets Wednesday, April 3, at 7:30 p. m. at the offices of World Wide Broadcasting Corporation, 70 Brookline Avenue, Boston, whose facilities will be used to illustrate points in the technical course. Charge for this latter course is $10.

HOLC in New England In First Foreclosure

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., March 29 (AP)—The first foreclosure in New England by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation resulted today in the advertising of a stately New Bedford property.

The house and land will be sold by auction April 17. Mortgaged for $5200 by the late Oliver A. Brunelle, the house for many years was a Mt. Pleasant Street showplace.

The foreclosure was announced by Charles P. Cotter of Boston, regional HOLC manager.

Woonsocket C. of C. Asks Political Truce

WOONSOCKET, R. I., March 29 (AP)—The Woonsocket Chamber of Commerce today led a citizens' movement to bring about immediate abatement of a week-old political feud within the Woonsocket City Hall.

The Chamber of Commerce, in a paid advertisement, "viewed with alarm the situation which makes this community the laughing stock of other communities." The Chamber urged that the politicians responsible "forget politics and get down to business."

Government to Lay Specter In South Dakota Ghost Town

But $1,000,000 of New England Money Will Remain Lost When Packing Plant, Idle for 44 Years, Goes Into Federal Hands

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

AUGUSTA, Maine, March 29—A South Dakota "ghost" town into which more than $1,000,000 of New England money, $500,000 from the State of Maine alone, the balance from Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont, was poured is being rehabilitated by the Federal Government, but the original New England investors will not receive one penny of what they sank in the town.

The "ghost" town, which is being resurrected, is South Sioux Falls, 10 miles or so from the business section of Sioux Falls proper.

The new town, intended as the "metropolis" of the South Dakota cattle country, was promoted nearly 50 years ago, and New England fell over itself to be permitted to invest its money. But just when the town's boom was at its height, the depression and the early '30's came on and put an end to the whole thing.

Packing Plant Still Stands

The principal building standing today in the "ghost" town is the big packing house which was going to make New England rich and do so much for South Dakota cattle interests. The $400,000 that this building and equipment cost was almost entirely from Maine investors. The building stands today without a crack in its walls, is a full city block in length, half a block wide and four stories high. It is built of pink quartzite.

Forty-four years ago this fall the cornerstone of the building was laid with many New Englanders, out to see the ceremony. Senator R. F. Pettigrew, chief figure in South Dakota at the occasion. That was in 1890. When the building was completed the following year, machinery was installed and everything made ready for business.

Not a Wheel Turned

Not a wheel in that big power plant has ever turned for its intended purpose. The postponement was continued from season to season. Taxes continued in full force. New England got tired of putting up cash. The plant went into the hands of receivers. All the investors lost their interest in the plant. New owners lost, in turn.

Down the street a few blocks a big woolen mill was erected. Some of the money in these mills came from Massachusetts and other New England states, but mostly from Massachusetts. The depression that ruined the packing house also ended the woolen mills' proposed career. Every cent put into the mill was sunk.

At Last an Angel Appears

A street car line 10 miles long was run from Sioux Falls to the new industrial "center" of the Dakotas. But lack of passengers caused this line to close.

Now the Federal Government has purchased the big packing house for $20,000. It will be turned into a vegetable packing plant and woodworking plant around the old town have been purchased.

Modern homes are to be built on acres of small farms tanging from four to ten acres and 500 families from all parts of South Dakota are to be located on these farms and given employment in the canning plant and the woodworking factory between seasons.

New York-Montreal Ship Route Advised Via Lake Champlain

BURLINGTON, Vt., March 29 (AP)—Senator Ernest W. Gibson (R.-Vt.) today told the Champlain Valley Council it would be to the advantage of the nation to construct an all-water route from the Hudson River through Lake Champlain to the St. Lawrence River for ocean-going vessels.

Leland Olds, secretary of the New York State Power Authority, said that the St. Lawrence waterway, part of the seaway project, would provide cheaper power for domestic and industrial use and for rural electrification in states bordering the seaway.

Philip Palter of Messina, N. Y., said the proposed seaway would help alleviate unemployment and that it would provide relief in each town on the waterway due to barge and port improvements in the various towns, and relief of unemployment throughout the valley.

Judge Victor P. Bohr of Plattsburg, N. Y., former president of the council, approved the idea as providing a short water route from Montreal to New York.

Newport Protests Baltimore's Plea For Constellation

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 29—Another North vs. South contest is on—this time in Congress. It revolves around disposal of the century-and-a-half-old Navy ship Constellation, sister ship of the famous Constitution.

Built in 1797 and launched at Baltimore, it rendered equally meritorious service with the Constitution but is not nearly so well known now because it did not have the benefit of a poem like Oliver Wendell Holmes' "Old Ironsides" to make it known. For the past 42 years the Constellation has been attached to the Newport Naval Training Station, but if a resolution just presented in Congress by Maryland Senators Tydings and Radcliffe is adopted, the boat will be moved to Baltimore.

Aroused by prospects of losing the Constellation, the people of Rhode Island, through Senator Jesse H. Metcalf, are asking Congress to repair the ship and preserve it as a naval museum at Newport. Under the Maryland plan the ship would be restored through public donations and anchored off Fort McHenry, Baltimore, where the "Star-Spangled Banner" was written. Near by would be the old yacht America, which originally won the America's Cup.

During the War of 1812 the Constellation rendered honorable service until it grounded on a sand pit in Norfolk harbor. When the Civil War broke out, the Constellation was searching African waters for slave ships, and during hostilities she escorted foreign waters for Confederate men-of-wars. Following a brief period of serving as receiving ship for Annapolis Naval Academy, the Constellation was brought to Newport where it has remained ever since.

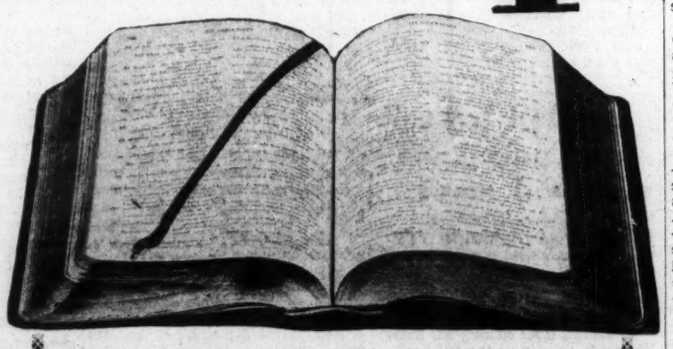
INCOMPARABLE . . . .
the greatest translation since the King James Version
THE BIBLE
A New Translation by
JAMES MOFFATT
LL.D., D.Litt.



THIS is the same Moffatt Bible which you see so frequently quoted in "Bible Notes" in the Christian Science Sentinel. The enthusiastic acceptance of this Bible, as evidenced by its ever-increasing sale, is eloquent testimony to its irresistible appeal to the hearts of Bible readers everywhere and its abiding worth in the literature of all time. To us of the Twentieth Century it brings the ageless message of an ever-present God.
Here is the Moffatt translation as presented in this new scholar's version written for our day: LUKE 12:22-31.
22 "Therefore I tell you, never trouble about what you are to eat in life, nor about what you are to put on your body;
23 life is something more than food, and the body is something more than clothing.
24 Look at the crows! they neither sow nor reap, no storehouse or granary have they, and yet God feeds them. How much more than birds are you worth!
25 Which of you can add an ell to his height by troubling about it?
26 and if you cannot manage even this, why trouble over other things?
27 Look how the lilies neither spin nor weave; and yet, I tell you, even Solomon in all his grandeur was never robed like one of them.
28 Now if God so clothes grass which blooms to-day in the field and is thrown to-morrow into the furnace, How much more will he clothe you, O men.
29 how little you trust Him! So do not seek food and drink,
30 and be worried; peoples make food and drink their aim in life, but your Father knows
31 quite well you need that; only seek his Realm, and it will be yours over and above.
Comments on the MOFFATT BIBLE
"Modern scholarship has done much to clarify the text both of the Old and New Testaments. I know of no translation more helpful to the student of the Scriptures than that made by Dr. James Moffatt, an outstanding Bible scholar. That is why I always keep, among others, a copy of this translation on my study table."
Albert F. Gilmore
"A fresh, scholarly translation. Cannot fail to be illuminating and radically interesting."
N. Y. Herald Tribune
"If you are wise you will file to read the old Bible in a new translation, which makes more intelligible to you the actual meaning of the words. From this point of view Dr. James Moffatt's translation is greatly to be recommended."
From A New Commentary on Holy Scripture
Scripture edited by Charles Gore.
"Dr. Moffatt's Bible is a great achievement. accurate in scholarship and reverent in intention."
Dean W. R. Inge
"This translation is bound to win its way into the general reading of the people."

"Eggi nof, O Iand"

Written for THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

IN THE book of Joel we read of a time when "the mountains shall drop down new wine, and the hills shall flow with milk, and all the rivers of Judah shall flow with waters, and a fountain shall come forth of the house of the Lord, and shall water the valley of Shittim." Joel, an Old Testament prophet, was inspired to write these words as a promise to the children of Israel that God would restore to them the blessings of which they had been deprived through disobedience to His commandments. Joel's prophecy was fulfilled, and the Israelites were restored to their own land. But the prophet's promise has a deeper meaning than the literal one. It is a promise to all mankind that God will restore to us the blessings we have lost through sin, disease, and death. Jesus' mission was to bring to the world the knowledge of God's love for His children, and to heal the sick and the sinful. He said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." (John 10:10.) Jesus' healing works were a fulfillment of the prophecy that God would restore to us the blessings we have lost through sin.

Mrs. Eddy, in her book "Miscellaneous Writings," writes: "Joel's prophecy, 'I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten,' is a promise that God, good, will destroy the error which has wasted time and substance. Joel's prophecy is fulfilled when sickness and sin disappear before Truth and Love." Mrs. Eddy's own life was a wonderful example of the fulfillment of this promise. Through her discovery of Christian Science she was restored to health after many years of invalidism, and she was able to accomplish a great work for humanity. Her writings and her life have been a blessing to countless people, and they will continue to be a blessing to the world for many years to come.

Joel's prophecy is fulfilled in the experience of every one who turns to God in humble prayer and trust. Sometimes it seems as though we have lost so much that we can never regain it. But God is able to restore to us all that we have lost through sin, disease, and death. He is able to heal the sick, to raise the dead, to restore to us our youth and our joy. He is able to bring us out of the wilderness of sin and sorrow into the promised land of peace and purity. He is able to fulfill all the promises of the prophets, and to bring to us the blessings which God has prepared for those who love Him.

Where Choice Becomes an Art

Bag, Fichu and Their Ilk Must Give Lilt to Costume

By Helen Johnson Keyes

Special from The Christian Science Monitor Bureau

New York

WHO likes to be always serious? The fascination of accessories is that they invite that exquisite foolishness which is the twin of wisdom. They are the dance and song in the fashion pageant that release the thought from solemn concentration on coats, suits and frocks.

But let no one think that accessories can be carelessly achieved. Gaiety is an art and one cannot become a virtuoso without study. To catch the lilt of the season's colors and forms and textures and so employ them that they vitalize the background against which they play their roles, and throw into relief the individuality of the wearer, is a matter of skill which, although rooted in instinct, must be perfected through practice.

The quality of accessories in this spring of 1935 is distinctness, grace, and reminiscence. They evoke, without actually imitating, the turbulence of periods that have passed into the mauve twilight.

There is, then, an enormous amount of handwork; and it is pleasant while feeling the refreshment of its daintiness to consider also how much employment it is giving to skilled fingers.

Particularly in neckwear can exquisite designs be worked out through the art of the needle; and we find collars, jabots, fichus, gilets, elaborately tucked, pleated and shirred. They are made of the daintiest of sheer materials and in pastel colors, among which pink, yellow and blue are favorites, and competitors of white. They are universally becoming and make it possible to wear with gaity the austere tailored suits which characterize the season.

Applique Figures

A pretty idea for print dresses is to cut out the figures in the design, overcast their edges or appliqué them on a ruffly background, and thus achieve soft trimming for the neck and cuffs which is part of the dress.

Sometimes instead of ruffles and handwork, neckwear and gilets make use of the extraordinarily interesting materials that come from the looms of the great textile designers, such as Rodier. Clayeopolter, for instance, has fashioned associates from such fabrics, cutting them so cleverly that from one long, shaped piece one gets a vest with a scarf. They come in various colors and patterns, are very distinguished of a suit shows a pigskin set of bag, gloves and belt.

Tailored bags may be worn with matching gloves, for which tailcts is a smart and attractive material this spring. Pique and other cotton materials, even prints, are employed for gloves and also for bags, as well as for collars, vestees and jabots, so that an ensemble of accessories is rather easily worked out.

Lord and Taylor is showing—particularly for use with navy and gray—bags, belts and gloves, of calf and kid respectively, in a color they call London tan, which is russet or ox blood. This is stunning and new with the season's favorite colors.

Most belts are very wide and have massive closings of metal or of leather worked into heavy forms. Out of nickel and gilt-plate, anchors, huge bows, loops, hooks and indescribable twistings are fashioned into buckles that constitute most of the front part of the belt. Wooden plates are used also and great knobs of various compositions.

Veils, Sockings, Shoes

Veils are being worn with tailored hats, an old style revived. They are chin-length for this type. Mainbocher has designed a veil for a pillbox turban which is a compromise, but unlike most compromises, very independent and interesting. It drapes the eyes, leaves the rest of the face uncovered, and then catches a loop loosely under the chin. It may be had at Russeks.

Navy stockings are the proper thing with navy suits; copper stockings are sometimes worn with brown; very sheer off-black hose are chic with black evening frocks.

Shoes are characterized by low strap and a matching one large enough to go around the neck or to dangle from a bracelet, are very much the thing.

Enthusiasm for handiwork distinguishes also evening and afternoon bags. The former are fashioned of lace handsewed on a foundation of silk or net either in rows or patterns and studded with pearls or beads; of shirred net; of moiré, perhaps pleated in sunburst patterns; of tulle, eyeleted and embroidered and gathered onto a silk foundation. For the tea hour the frameless "money bag" is prized of honor, and everything that can be done with a tasteful needle to elaborate the surface of the taffeta, failie, grosgrain, printed silk, or other fabric is in order. Although most of them are soft pouches, others are tendered very practical by squares or rectangular bottoms that make the contents easy to get at. Elizabeth Hawes has designed some of these and Lord and Taylor carries them. Like the modern woman, they combine an appearance of frivolity with a firm and useful foundation character.

Tailored Bags

This wedge shape is used also a good deal in tailored bags of calf, pigskin, patent leather, saddle leather, pinsel, chamois, and so forth. Some of them close with double flaps, one of which may be initialed; others with huge crystal balls. Metal chain handles are the newest thing and it is smart to carry the purse at one's side, arm's length down.

Huge bags of printed linen on wooden frames are again seen for sports wear; they carry knitting very comfortably or a book.

The bag should be matched to some other accessory, perhaps the belt, perhaps the gloves, the shoes, or even the hat. Chamois is easy to carry through in this ensemble idea, and may include all the articles just mentioned. It is newer than suede and is illustrated on this page, and is to the costume series. Pointers for 'Mrs. Sew-and-Sew'

Written for The Christian Science Monitor

"MRS. SEW-AND-SEW" is an amusingly descriptive name which may be appropriately applied to each of the many women engaged in making clothes for herself and her family. Even the woman whose previous sewing efforts have been limited to the darning of stockings and the fastening on of buttons is now apt to avail herself of the many practical helps offered in the direction of home dressmaking. There is the same perdonable pride in wearing one's own handiwork as in preparing and serving a delicious meal; and, according to the experience of many women, successful accomplishment in both these lines of work is largely the result of interest and perseverance, rather than unusual aptitude.

The present revival in home sewing has been, to a great extent, spon-sored by the large department stores, whose varied stocks include every imaginable factor toward the success of the home dressmaker. In addition to the actual goods carried, many stores offer the services of a fashion adviser, competent to guide the prospective purchaser in the choice of fabrics and the selection of appropriate patterns. Sometimes there is a so-called "Dressmaking Studio" or a "Sewing Center," where, for a nominal charge in addition to the purchase of materials, the untrained seamstress may develop into an expert dressmaker, with a finished garment to display in lieu of a diploma!

Expert Advice

An expert adviser in this kind of training encourages beginners by assuring them that the rules for successful dressmaking are simple and few. One of great importance is the selection of a pattern suited to bring out the best lines of the wearer's figure and which will meet the requirements of the occasions when the dress is to be worn. The pattern chosen should also be appropriate for the material in which it is to be developed. If new goods are to be bought, the fabric should be of good quality as it is discouraging to the beginner to have her early efforts prove unsatisfactory because of materials that do not keep their shape after a few wearings. The fabric department and the pattern section adjoin each other in many shops, so that it is easy for the customer to ascertain the exact yardage called for by the pattern selected and then purchase the material at an adjacent counter.

Of great importance is accuracy in following directions for the use of the pattern, especially in the way the pieces are laid on the material. This opportunity to profit by the knowledge of experienced designers and dressmakers should not be overlooked, as every inch of fabric has been economically planned for in the use of the pattern.

The modern "Mrs. Sew-and-Sew" realizes the importance of getting acquainted with her pattern, which, by the way, she buys according to bust measurement as it is easier to make alterations at the hipline. Even though the odd-shaped bits of tissue may at first look like a jig-saw puzzle, a study of the accompanying picture, diagrams, step-by-step charts and other practical explanations that are an important part of a pattern, will soon banish any mystery.

Look Before You Cut

"Look twice before you cut once" is a good rule for the beginner to follow and it is well to remember the old adage "a stitch in time saves nine"—this being especially true when it is a basting stitch! The inexperienced seamstress cannot afford to overlook the importance of basting, though, later on, she may gain speed up her work by running long seams on the machine, the edges of the material merely pinned at intervals. However, those who "make haste slowly" are more likely to achieve successes than those who ignore the preliminary niceties of the interesting sewing game.

Fortunately for the busy home dressmaker, sewing is one of the occupations that allows the worker to utilize her time to double purpose. An industrious needlewoman, for instance, is making the most of her sewing hours by keeping in step with the French lessons of her high school daughter, and even enlarging her vocabulary in a practical way by looking up the new words that suggest themselves in connection with her sewing. Another sewing mother, while her hands were busy with her needle, thought out the salient points of an important club paper she was to prepare and deliver. She even practiced, aloud, when she was finished by herself, the reading of the finished paper.

These two instances merely go to show that while the hands are busily engaged, one's mind may be free for other things. A study of the accompanying picture, diagrams, step-by-step charts and other practical explanations that are an important part of a pattern, will soon banish any mystery.

Of course, Mrs. Thomas, who is a reader of the Monitor, is right. "Factory-flavoring" can not compare with nature's own fruits or vegetables. Just try this:

On Coming Out All Right—and Together

Adventures in Homemaking

THE other day there came to me a faint recollection of an old gentleman standing on a platform reciting rows of seats which were filled with people. He took from his pocket a funny little contrivance about a note on it, and, after singing do-me-sol-do, he raised his arms and began to beat time, and everyone sang.

It was a hazy, misty vision. I could not seem to dismiss it from my thoughts and so I wrote to a woman who is very much older than I am, and who has lived all her life in the little town of which I was thinking. I asked her to tell me what it was that I was trying to remember.

Her reply amused and interested me not a little. She wrote, "You are probably trying to remember something which you never really experienced, but of which you must have heard when you were a child. It is this: one of the deacons in our church here some 75 or 80 years ago, before musical instruments, even cabinet organs, were common in New England, was leader of the choir and master of the singing school. His tuning fork always sounded the note upon which our songs were to start. Sometimes he would pitch it a bit too high or too low for us and we would have to begin over again, but we always came out all right, and together, at the end."

And then she added this tribute: "We always came out all right—and together—whenever we followed the good old deacon." leading, whether it was in music, or in the everyday affairs of life. How we need him, and his tuning fork today!"

It is, I suppose, natural for that gentle woman of another generation to feel that something of grace and harmony has departed with tuning forks and scanned singing. Certainly the tempo of today is vastly different. But I wonder if we cannot find somewhere a tuning fork to start us so that we may come out all right—and together.

We are singing the same notes today that those people sang who followed the lead of the deacon's tuning fork. There are no new notes. We put them together differently, that is all.

The most modern of jazz music is composed of the same notes that go to make up Handel's "Messiah," or Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata." They are put together differently and played or sung at different tempos. Those are the only things that make them seem so remote from each other. The real values of the notes, as notes, have not changed.

Nor have life's fundamental values changed. The do-me-sol-do of peace, harmony and honesty, and friendliness, is exactly the same that it has been since the beginning of time. Perhaps some of us have pitched our lives a bit too high or too low, have made the tempo a bit too fast or too slow, but, like the good old deacon, we can always get again and again, until we attain the harmony that will make us "come out all right—and together."

'An Omelet Please'

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

Madrid

FOR the Spanish housewife, the omelet is the great mainstay.

She may have nothing ready in her pantry. It may be bare of ham, of canned victuals, held to be cold comfort for normal Spanish palates, but it ahs has a few eggs and some crisp bread, there will be a feast ready in the twinkling of an eye, knowing that people always order omelet in preference to boiled eggs in Spain where even the best cook miscalculates the minutes.

Before you start off on the circumlet habit is that it will probably be carried out and thrown away but which have not lost their charm entirely. Gather them from their dusty corners and have some fun dressing up the house.

A lampshade can add to or detract from the appearance of a room the same as a hat can make or break a costume. But how thrilling it is to embark in new attire! It gives one the feeling of adventure and frivolity. And such does a new shade to a room.

First of all, see what possibilities you have with regard to frames and what bases they look well upon. The frame should not be so large as to give the appearance of top-heaviness, nor yet so small as to give insufficient light.

After you have found suitable combinations, visit your closet or scrap bag and bring out every kind of unused material, which still has its color, to experiment with. You cannot pick out the remains of your green linen suit and say, "That will make a grand shade for the lamp on the gate leg table!" Maybe the table is in front of a window and the linen would be pallid beside the green window shade. Or maybe the texture is not suitable for such a frame and base.

Experimenting

Bring out the bundles and begin experimenting. Drape one piece after another over the frame and see if it "fits" in. Is it suitable to the frame and base? To the objects about it? To serve its purpose of focusing light? If the material does this adequately, then decide how you will make the shade.

If the material is thin or a light colored lining or one of contrasting color should be placed inside. Cut and fit a pattern from paper or muslin, making allowance for edge covering. Cut the material and pin on the frame, then baste, being sure to stretch the material so there will be a smooth surface. Perhaps you wish trimming of some contrasting color or design. This gives the shade a finished look of distinction.

I have a friend who, for some time, has been lampshade cover conscious. She is continually making a new shade for her end table lamp. Some time ago she was eager for a new lamp, so, planning through her closet, she found a gray skirt which had been outgrown. It was very light in texture and color.

On a Wide Frame

Her lamp frame was wire and since the material was a silk and woolen mixture no lining was needed. She cut small strips of the gray and covered the wires neatly. Then she covered the outside in a tailored fashion. For a dash of color she added, around the bottom, four one-fourth inch strips of alternating brilliant blue and red silk. The effect is fetching against her dull gray rug.

Children's rooms may be made delightful by a change of lampshades. Maybe Polly was especially fond of a red and white animal dress she has outgrown. What more pleasure could she have than a tiny lamp of this same dress on her table.

Children Like to Cook

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

Most little girls enjoy cooking. However, I have found that my 13-year-old daughter prefers those recipes which she can prepare without my assistance. To her, half the fun is in placing a dish upon the table and saying: "Daddy, I made this for you all by myself."

Here are three recipes which—according to "Daddy"—are the finest in the world. He calls them:

Partner's Nut Bread

Sift together 5 times

3½	cups flour
¾	cup sugar
3½	teaspoons baking powder
1	teaspoon salt. Mix thoroughly with
1	tablespoon dry ingredients
1	cup nut meats (English walnuts or pecans) which have been rolled or chopped into small pieces. Next break
1	egg into
1½	cup milk and beat until egg and milk are blended. Add the egg mixture to the dry mixture and stir until your arm says: "Enough." Pour into a greased pan—Partner uses one 8 inches by 12 inches—and let rise for 20 minutes. Bake in a slow oven about 350° F. for one hour.

Partner's Peanut Cookies

	Cream together
1	cup brown sugar
½	cup butter, and
2	eggs. Add to this mixture
2½	cups flour which has been sifted with
1	teaspoon baking powder
½	teaspoon ginger
½	teaspoon cinnamon, and
½	teaspoon cloves. Next add
1	cup raisins and
½	cup unsalted Spanish peanuts. Now add
1	teaspoon soda which has been dissolved in
2	tablespoons of boiling water. Blend the entire mixture well and drop by teaspoon on oiled cookie sheet and bake in quick oven, about 425° F. for 15 minutes.

Partner's Breakfast Apples

Combine

1	cup sugar, and
1	cup water, and bring to a boil and pour this ½ cup red hots (cinnamon drops). Add the egg mixture over four apples which have been pared, cored, and placed in a baking dish. Bake in a moderate oven about 400° F. for 35 minutes or until the apples are a brilliant red.

	Few whole cloves on sugar. Pill dish with ham mixture and spread butter over top of loaf. Then pour
1	cup cream over loaf and bake in moderate oven (350° F.) for one hour.

Marchee Salad

Mix together the following ingredients:

15	marshmallows quartered
1	cup cottage cheese

Mayonnaise. Serve, well chilled, on crisp

	Lettuce.

Date Cake With Fudge Frosting

1	tablespoon butter
1	cup sugar. Add
1	cup broken walnuts and
1	cup chopped dates. Stir
1	teaspoon baking soda into
1	cup boiling water and add to first mixture. Sift
½	teaspoon salt and
1½	to 2 cups cake flour into mixture until it is slightly stiffer than

loaf cake batter. Add

1	teaspoon vanilla. Bake in well greased tube pan for about one hour in moderate oven 350°-375° F. Frost with fudge frosting when well cooled.

Fudge Frosting

Boil until it forms a soft ball in cold water,

2	cups sugar
	Dash of salt
1	cup milk and
2	squares of chocolate (cut fine). Then add
1	teaspoon vanilla and
1	teaspoon butter. Let cool and then beat. Frost side of cake before frosting is too thick and when beginning to set, spread on cake on top and sides.

Good-Night Sweet Dreams!

● It costs so little—treat yourself to the soft white cares of Pequot sheets! Snuggle deep in their gentle smoothness—sleep well!

MUCH OF THE solid comfort of Pequot sheets is due to their firm, substantial body. They do not rumple as easily as lighter sheets. They stay smooth. Their weight also makes them definitely white; tinting does not show through. Yet they wash quickly and easily, and handle beautifully. Pequots, of course, are the longest-wearing, most economical sheets in America. Won't you get a pair and try them?

Restrictions in Belgium Cuts Are Marked as Cold Value of Its Currency

LONDON, March 30—Belgium's announcement today of a 10 to 25 per cent devaluation of the belga is considered here as a bold resolve to regain a lost place in foreign trade. The Netherlands and Switzerland are the next weakest links in the gold bloc chain. The Netherlands florin is held to be particularly sensitive to the belga devaluation.

Special to The Christian Science Monitor on Three Ministers

PARIS, March 30—France remains officially unaffected by today's devaluation of the belga, however, serious concern is felt here about the influence effect on the franc.

Premier Flandin, Finance Minister Germain-Martin and Foreign Minister Pierre Etienne Flandin terminate the effect on the franc of the devaluation of the belga in a conference which began at 10 o'clock this morning and lasted for two hours. Before the conference Premier Flandin declared that the belga devaluation would not affect the franc.

The Finance Committee of the Chamber of Deputies unanimously approved the application of the cotton textile industry for a tariff increase of 50 per cent.

French Franc Withstands Belga's Decline

But Reserves Unshaken

PARIS, March 30—The Bank of France lost 1,200,000,000 francs in gold during the week ended March 29, as the withdrawals of foreign balances continued. The bank's gold holdings now total 82,100,000,000 francs, as against 83,300,000,000 francs a week ago.

The bank's discounts and advances declined 1,100,000,000 francs, while its note circulation fell 1,600,000,000 francs. Treasury deposits increased 1,000,000,000 francs.

The bank's gold reserve ratio now stands at 76.08 per cent, as against 76.54 per cent a week ago. The proportion of gold to sight liabilities rose from 68.36 per cent to 68.70 per cent.

The bank is not entirely responsible for the gold movement, since it is only a clearing house for the Treasury, which receives the gold and pays out francs.

Kreuger Loan Plan Is Rejected by Swedish Parliament

STOCKHOLM, March 30 (AP)—The Swedish Parliament today rejected the plan of Ivar Kreuger, late match king, to float a loan of 150,000,000 kroner ($40,500,000) in the United States.

The vote was 110 to 100 in the Second Chamber, which had previously rejected the plan in the First Chamber by a vote of 80 to 70.

The plan was opposed by the Social Democrats, who have a majority in the Second Chamber, and by the Conservatives, who have a majority in the First Chamber.

The Social Democrats opposed the plan because they said it would be unfair to the Swedish people to borrow money in the United States when they could not borrow in Sweden.

The Conservatives opposed the plan because they said it would be unfair to the Swedish people to borrow money in the United States when they could not borrow in Sweden.
